

A Lifetime at USAA

6/18/2015 - Enterprise News

As USAA marks its 93rd anniversary, employee Marilyn Dworaczyk celebrates her 48th.

Marilyn Dworaczyk started her USAA career straight out of high school.

When 17-year-old Marilyn Dworaczyk walked the stage at Poth High School's graduation in 1967, she knew she had a job waiting for her. But she probably didn't realize she'd taken the first step toward a lifetime career with that employer.

"It was the last week of school," recalls Dworaczyk (pronounced DOOR-rock-sick). "My mom said USAA had called and wanted me to start working on Monday, right after graduation."

Dworaczyk was excited about becoming a file clerk at USAA's Broadway Street office, but she was torn. Chosen as a Sweetheart for the FFA, formerly the Future Farmers of America, she had a pageant competition that same Monday she was to begin her new job.

"I was so nervous when I called back and asked them if I could start a week later," Dworaczyk says.

Her request was granted. One week after her high school graduation, Dworaczyk, who didn't even have a driver's license at the time, began a career that has spanned close to half a century, making her the longest-tenured active employee at USAA.

"I rode with my older brother to Floresville where I caught a ride with another employee who is now retired," says Dworaczyk, who made $4,148 in 1968, her first full year at USAA.

Today, the country girl who grew up on a farm still lives in Poth and travels about 100 miles round trip each day to work at USAA's Home Office.

The 65-year-old mother of three and grandmother of one is currently the product management director for USAA's rental property insurance product. Over the past 48 years, she has experienced many changes at USAA, both professionally and culturally, and watched the organization grow exponentially. She has worked for six different CEOs and had about 15 different job titles — role changes that were mostly promotions.

"I was working in policy service when there weren't computers," Dworaczyk says. "It was all through mail." In 2000, she was the business manager who provided the first auto premium quote via the Internet.

She often gets wide-eyed looks from younger colleagues when they ask how long she's worked at USAA. Hearing the phrase, "I wasn't even born yet," is nothing new, but it doesn't deter her.

Dworaczyk has no plans to retire; she enjoys the job too much. "I tell everyone I'm hard to get rid of."

Take Aways

- Since 1978, Dworaczyk has taken advantage of USAA's Vanpool Program, which shuttles her and about six colleagues who live nearby to and from work.
- A majority of her career has been in P&C, but she also spent 12 years in IT.
- She says technology has been the biggest change over the past five decades.
- She credits her career longevity to varying roles and a constant desire to learn new things.
- After work, she used to play on softball and volleyball teams at USAA and still plays in an annual game between departments in P&C.
- Dworaczyk has two sons, a daughter and a 6-year-old granddaughter she likes to spoil.
- Advice to younger colleagues: "There's so much opportunity at USAA, you just need to look for it. There's also a lot of opportunity to advance."
